Our Open Road

In 2012, Adam and Emily Harteau answered the call of the open road by embarking on a road trip from Los Angeles, California to Tierra del Fuego, Argentina and back, with their one-year-old daughter Colette. But what started off as a one-year tour in their in their VW Westfalia has turned into a way of life. Having visited some 12 countries to date, they are now into their second year of travelling overland through the Americas. Since the beginning, they have documented their overland travels with writings and photographs on their blog Our Open Road and across social media platforms, offering an ongoing “modern family portrait” that has won the hearts of some 60,000 Instagram followers today.
