

Editorial Flow

From Monday to Saturday, the typical structure of the New York Times is in four sections. Section "A" contains hard news: International, National, Metro, and Op-Ed. On average it is 24 pages long. The "B" section, with an average length of 12 pages, begins with Business and also includes Sports and Obituaries. Section "C" is Arts. The "D" section, according to the plan devised at the end of the 1970s and continuing basically unchanged today is as follows: Science on Monday,

Food on Tuesday, and Style on Thursday. The "C" and "D" sections tend to have an average length of 8 pages each. On the weekend, as is logical, the menu of news and the content offered in each section increases. The Sunday edition has a much greater number of pages, the offering is much richer, including the sections, Review, Travel, Wealth, Real Estate, Arts&Leisure, NYT for Kids, and the NYT Book Review, among others including The New York Times Magazine.

FRONT PAGE

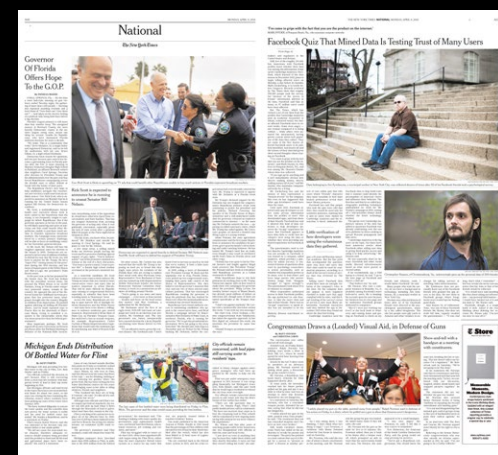

SECTION 1 24-28 PAGES

This section begins with one or two pages with a large index or navigator.

INTERNATIONAL 10 PAGES

A main part of the newspaper is dedicated to the hard news sections: International (10 pages), National (6-8 pages), New York (3 pages), and Opinion (2 pages).

NATIONAL NEWS 6-8 PAGES

NEW YORK 2-4 PAGES

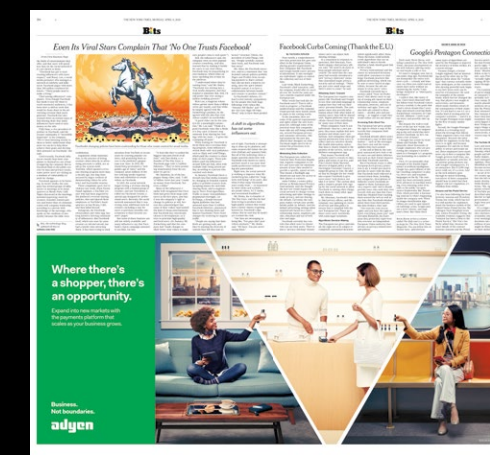

OPINION 2 PAGES

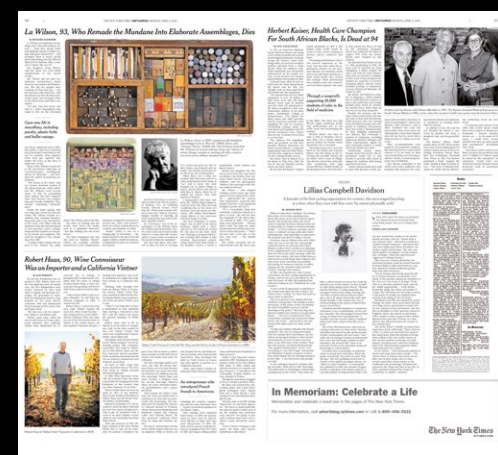

SECTION 2 BUSINESS 12-14 PAGES ON AVERAGE

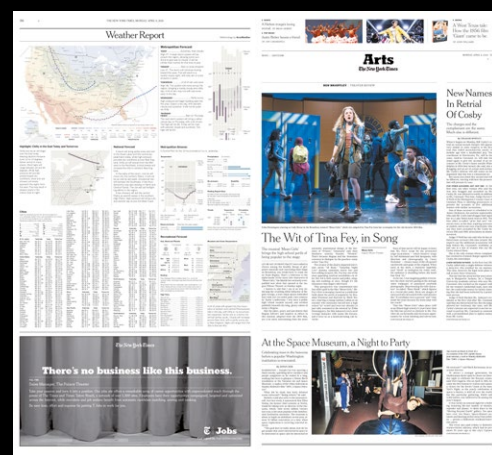

The section opens with Business and Economy coverage and also includes the obituaries, sports coverage, and the weather.

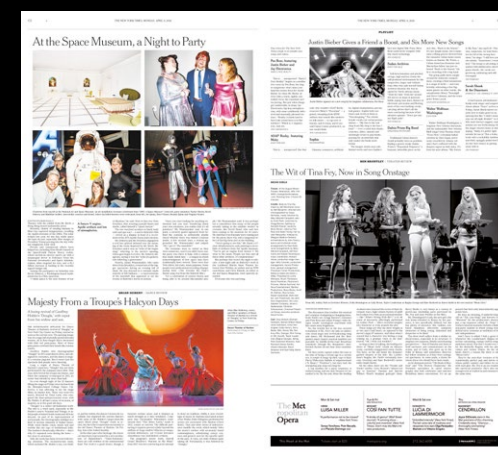

SPORTS 4-6 PAGES

OBITUARIES 2 PAGES

WEATHER 1 PAGE

SECTION 3 ARTS 8 PAGES ON AVERAGE

Includes all the arts and entertainment news plus reviews and criticism of film, theater, and art. On Friday it expands to two sections of 16 and 12 pages.

MOVIES 8 PAGES

TV 1 PAGE

SECTION 4 12 PAGES ON AVERAGE

Variable themes, according to the editorial plan developed in the 1970s. On Mondays, Science; Tuesdays, Food; Thursday, Style; Fridays, Weekend; Saturdays, Home.

LAST PAGE