

A Luxurious Take on Studio Living

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM ◦ The owner of this 45 m² (484 ft²) west London pied-à-terre commissioned Nimtim Architects to create a luxurious but practical apartment that retained the generosity of scale of the original period building. Nimtim's solution was to divide up the space with a central pod containing the bathroom, which is set down from the ceiling, allowing light to reach the bedroom at the rear.

To guarantee a good night's sleep, acoustic glass was used to fill the void above the pod, while a large sound-proof door folds back against the wall. The bedroom beyond features bespoke wardrobes and a foldaway bed that allows the space to be used solely as a dressing room. To add to the air of luxury, the bathroom is clad internally in white Carrera marble and externally with a gray marble; the latter material is also integrated into the kitchen as a splashback.
