

Before modification

The original building, parts of which date back 200 years, was used as stables for horses and donkeys.

used materials that were used traditionally on the island, such as iroko window frames, concrete, and white-chalk plastered stone walls.

Although utilities were added, the house is still off-grid, with water coming from a private well and solar panels providing energy not just for water and floor heating but all of the electricity. The building has been designed to become a showcase for the work they sell: Coco-Mat beds, Étoffe Unique upholstery, plus other furniture, lighting, and carpets from their partner shop Modern Vintage. _____
