

Noah's flagship store in New York City doubles as a community hub. It's meant to let customers relax and have a dialogue with the products and the staff. The approach is inviting, not exclusive. In this way, the brand also serves as a platform for conversation about the social and environmental issues that it cares about.

