

Fruitpress

Moulinex | Model No. 502
France, 1976

The mid-1970s fruit juicer by Moulinex is a practical, simple design. The sunny yellow press is affixed to a white base, with a clear plastic container below to catch the juice and pour it via a small nozzle. Instead of using an on-off switch, the electric motor is activated when the fruit is pushed down onto the press. The device is tall enough to fit a glass below the nozzle, though the 502 was available with an additional attachment, a bowl, that could be fixed below the presser to accommodate larger volumes of juice.
