

Age-Inclusive Design

A variety of indoor and outdoor spaces encourages different forms of interaction between the generations, such as sharing a meal, playing in the courtyard, or tending to the flower and vegetable gardens.

How It All Works

From the street, the complex appears as one sprawling building. Yet the four, three-story houses and two, two-story houses are arranged around a central courtyard on the upper-ground floor.

Connections

A communal terrace with chairs and tables on the upper-ground floor connects some of the homes. The layout encourages an intentional community of families to spend time together.

