

Grunewald (“green forest”) has become one of the family’s favorite forests to visit. Located just 10 kilometers (6 miles) from the center of the German capital, it ranges across 3,000 hectares (7,413 acres) and consists largely of conifers and birch trees.