LEFT
The nautilus shell grows larger on each spiral by Phi (approximately 1.618), a mathematical ratio first proposed by the Greek mathematician Euclid as a means to sum up beauty.

RIGHT
A watercolor illustration of the yellow crowned heron from The Birds of America, a book by naturalist and painter John James Audubon that was published in sections between 1827 and 1838.