

There is an intentional continuity between the materials and forms used in the former sugar mill and those of the newly constructed buildings that have enabled the site to be transformed into a hotel complex, mediated by a countryside strategy which provides new pools to reflect both aspects.