Nestled between scenic hills and facing the beach and Kattegat, Heatherhill Beach House blends Danish architectural tradition and contemporary innovation. In every facet, the holiday home is a testament to the beauty and simplicity of nature. As a "ground-up" project, two carefully crafted axes effortlessly connect different functions within the house, ensuring a harmonious flow from one space to the next. The barn structure's profile contrasts with the soft hills and undulating landscape surrounding the house. Its cedar cladding provides a natural skin that will patinate over time to a beautiful silvery color that blends with the site. Inside, nature-inspired elements and mid-century modern aesthetics have been selected for longevity. Each component serves a purpose beyond the immediate, contributing to a timeless atmosphere.

Heatherhill Beach House by Norm Architects, Vejby Strand, Denmark