

For Christer, nothing beats the magic of a summer's day at La Banchina. 'If I end up out there with a couple of friends and we have some cold beers and watch the sunset while people are swimming and having a good time – it just adds up in a more special way,' he says.

Of course, it's not all sunsets and rainbows. Covid was a 'pain in the ass,' notes Christer, and La Banchina didn't escape the post-pandemic labor shortages and cost increases that took a chunk out of the global hospitality industry.

'Watch the sunset while people are swimming and having a good time – it adds up in a special way.'