

A Rustic Getaway in the Heart of the Hudson Valley Forest

TIVOLI BARN
TIVOLI, NEW YORK

On the banks of Stoney Creek, just two hours from New York City, Tivoli Barn feels a world away from city life. This unique retreat is nestled in the Hudson Valley, which is peppered with farms, hiking trails, and quaint towns with lively main streets. Just a few minutes' walk from the small village of Tivoli, this 1800s barn has been stylishly converted to welcome visitors in need of a retreat from the Big Apple.

The owners are intentional about maintaining the property's rustic charm, which also includes a picturesque and modern two-bedroom cottage. The barn's spacious two stories can accommodate up to six guests.

In the living area of the barn, wicker chairs adorned with sheepskins hang elegantly from the ceiling, and a couch in the corner beckons for an afternoon read. The classic Vermont Castings woodstove adds to the cozy ambience. Windows look out on the surrounding forest with over twenty different species of mature trees whose beauty shifts and evolves throughout the seasons. The fully equipped chef's kitchen is ready for farm-to-table gourmet creations made from produce found at the local farmers' market. Upstairs, beds are tucked into two different sleeping nooks, separated by privacy curtains, with a separate loft bedroom above. Situated on 4 acres (1.6 hectares), the property takes full advantage of its remote wooded setting with multiple outdoor hangouts. The barn features a spacious black locust deck with an outdoor shower. A wooden platform is perched above the creek with a pebble beach close by. Paths lead through the woods and down to the pond where there is a picnic table, and a fire-pit circled by Adirondack chairs is tucked in a clearing among the trees.

This relaxing and calm setting is welcoming all year round—the sound of the wind in the trees or the rush of the stream becomes the soundtrack to a relaxing weekend far away from the stresses of city life.
