

Each Sunday at noon as food's being grilled,
Baked or boiled and all bellies filled,
Smells float from the door and into his nose.
He shuts his brown eyes and imagines the show.
There's ham and chicken and gravy with peas,
Bright summer cakes and big chunks of cheese.

