

The Big Feast

What about throwing a party for your best friends and cooking some of your favorite recipes for them?! You could have a theme for your party: It could be a specific color, such as blue, and everyone is asked to wear something in that color. Or it could be to celebrate a special event such as Halloween. Or why not ask them to dress up as the characters from your favorite TV show? Plan a whole afternoon and evening together and don't forget to tell your guests to come hungry!

Create a "photo booth" by hanging a blanket on a wall for you and your guests to stand in front of and put out some props. They could be crazy glasses, fun masks, hats, or wigs—anything you can think of. Print the photographs off afterwards and make a gallery of the best ones!

To get everyone excited, send out invitations to your party with the theme of your party on.

Find out everyone's favorite songs and prepare a playlist that will have your guests rushing to the dance floor. Just ask them what music they like when they reply to your invitation!

You can decorate the food table with tablecloths and plants (or flowerpot desserts) and put paper garlands and balloons up around the room—anything that helps make it look like a special occasion.
