

One side of the home contains private living quarters, while the other houses communal areas with floating walkways and bridges connecting the spaces, reinforcing the home's relationship with the hillside terrain.