

A quarter-mile of cantilevered concrete ramps climb the museum's outer walls. The building's domed skylight, or "oculus," consists of twelve sections resting on concrete structural columns that extend down through the building.

