

If you know where to look, you will find a path on the edge of a small city. The path winds its way through woods until it reaches a river.